As Mr. Walter Schmidt of Tinley Park played the wedding march on the organ, Miss Marie Wille and Elmer Feigel, brother of the bride, Miss Elsie Feigel, the maid of honor, Vernon Schultz, the ring bearer and Valmeir Harms, the flower girl, preceded the bride, who entered on the arm of her father. They were met at the altar by the groom who was attended by his brother Elmer Knierum.

George Feigel and Louis Shultz acted as ushers. The bride wore a floor length white brocaded velvet dress with a long veil and carried an arm bouquet of white flowers.

Alvin Hill New Head of Frankfort Endeavor Club

The Men's Endeavor Club of the Frankfort M. E. church held their first meeting of this fall and winter season in the newly remodeled parlors of the church Monday evening. Despite a heavy down pour of rain twenty-five were present.

The evening's program was made interesting with song and a very graphic word picture of a trip to Mexico delivered by Rev. Mr. Hon-dracek of the Peotone M. E. church. He showed a number of photos of the old Missions and Cathedrals in Mexico. He pointed out that the present trend of the government is toward communism but that efforts are being made to educate the people, most of whom are illiterate.

At the close of the program an election of officers was held and the following were elected: President, Alvin Hill; Vice President, A. C. Bauch; Secretary, Urban Schell-hase; Treasurer, F. J. Kohlhausen.

The program committee is to be appointed by the president. It was voted to hold the annual Father and Son banquet Thursday night, November 18th. It was also voted to hold a sauer kraut and sparerib supper Friday night, October 22 in the church parlors. The Club is planning other activities for the winter season.

Mokena Mayor Catches Up With Pilfering Boys

Mayor Harry F. Mall of Mokena, who operates the local Malm Lumber Co., yard and office, has been missing various sums of money from the cash register for the past few weeks and at first thought some grownups were responsible for the thefts. Finally local candy dealers became suspicious when a group of boys began to spend money quite freely for candy and told Mr. Mall about this. The latter marked some of the money in his cash register and in a few days the marked coins were in circulation.

Last Friday afternoon Mr. Mall hid in the Lumber office. Soon after five o'clock four boys entered the rear of the lumber yard and soon a trap door leading to the furnace room in the basement opened and a boy emerged. He walked behind the counter, took the cash register key from behind a picture frame and opened up the register. Mr. Mall had removed his shoes and was able to creep up on the unsuspecting boy without being heard. Mr. Mall carried a good sized paddle in one hand. He grabbed the astounded boy and administered the soundest spanking this boy ever had. The youth confessed and implicated three other boys. Mayor Mall then called on the parents of the boys and told them what had taken place. In all about $60 had been pilfered from the cash drawer within a few weeks.

COOK COUNTY TO PAVE WOLF RD NORTH OF 143D

For well nigh unto nine years the Mokena Wolf Road Boosters have been working for and advocating that Wolf Road be made an outer belt line road in the Chicagoland territory and this suggestion is gradually coming into a full realization.

Cook County has considered Wolf Road an important highway for a long time and announcement has just been made by the Cook County Highway department that among the new paving projects the county has listed for completion soon is the paving of Wolf Road from 143rd street in Orland township north to Ford Road at a cost of $69,970. This will bring Wolf Road into connection with other sections of Wolf Road already paved north of the canal and thus make it a thru paved road to Wheeling as the original Wolf Road Boosters had planned.

In view of the continuation of the Wolf Road paving north by Cook County, efforts must now be made to induce the Will County officials to interest the State Highway Department to finish the paving of Wolf Road from the Lincoln Highway south to Route 45, a distance of about two and a half miles. When this is done Wolf Road will be a thru road from Kankakee to Wheeling. (Continued on back page)

Home Heating Hints

By John Barclay
Heating Expert

Have Your Furnace Cleaned and Inspected Now Before the Cold Weather Comes Along.

HERE'S a straight money-saving tip: Before starting your heating plant this fall, be sure it's thoroughly vacuum cleaned. It is one of the greatest precautions you can take to insure its most economical operation during the winter ahead.

When the heating surfaces are covered with as little as one-sixteenth of an inch of soot (which acts as an insulator against heat, being five times as effective as asbestos) it wastes fully one-quarter of every ton of coal you burn! What's more, a furnace caked with dirt and dust won't deliver nearly as much heat as a clean furnace will.

Call in a competent service man now and arrange for a thorough vacuum cleaning of your furnace. He will do the job without muss or inconvenience.

While he's doing that, have him check up the whole heating system from flue to ashpit—guard against any possible failure of the plant after cold weather sets in. I know you'll find the cost is little compared with the staggering cost of the fuel that a dirty, faulty plant is sure to waste! Every home-owner wants to save and not waste his fuel dollars!

The laughing tenderness of his voice twisted Brooke's heart unbearably. She tore her thoughts from him and watched her brother. She could see his lips move in unison with the lines spoken on the stage.

The curtain fell slowly on the minor climax of the first act. The setting and theme had been established and the characters presented. The audience applauded enthusiastically. From a hole in the curtain Brooke saw the New York producer go up the aisle. Would he return?

"Don't you dare go away, don't you dare!" she lunged at his straight back.

"How did it go?" Sam's voice was hoarse.

"It's wonderful, Sam. Not an unnecessary word; every line was 'Forward march!' for your story. The acting is the best I've ever seen in an amateur performance."

"So what? Does it prove anything? They're all good except Daphne; she isn't getting her lines over. I hold my breath every time she opens her mouth. Isn't Trent great? He's the spark-plug of the cast. Wait till you see him in the crucial moment in the next act, when he thinks the girl he loves has double-crossed him."

Jerry Field appeared beside her dressed in leather jacket and knickers, with a gun in his hand.

"How's it going, Brooke?"

"I can't see the stage, but from the response of those out front I'd say it was a hit. You're grand in that sports costume. You've made every point, Jerry."

"Thanks. That's because when I say a word of love to Lucette I'm saying it to you." He caught her hand and pressed his lips to it fervently.

"Please—don't, Jerry."

"You've said that too many times, sweet thing. After the play we'll have a reckoning—get me?"

"After the play." Brooke repeated the words to herself. So much was to happen that would change lives, after the play.

"Hey! Field! Field, come on!"

Sam's whisper. Sam's beckoning hand. Brooke followed Jerry as far as the wings from which she could see him drop to a log on the stage, left center.

"Why don't you turn thumbs up and end the poor boy's torment?" asked a low voice behind her.

She turned quickly. Something in Mark Trent's voice made her furiously angry.

"That's quite a suggestion that I end 'the poor boy's torment.' I will. Tonight."

"Don't do it until I change after the show. I want to drive you home, Brooke. There is something I must say to you."

Brooke felt the blood rush to her face and recede. Had Henri double-crossed her and told him about the will? Did Mark Trent think she intended to hide it? She wouldn't give him a chance to accuse her before she produced that paper locked in her desk. She said as steadily as she could with his eyes boring into her soul:

"Sorry. The minute the curtain falls, I shall dash to Lookout House to change into something snappy for the grand celebration. You wouldn't have me come to your grand party in this green knit, would you? Quick! Sam wants the wings cleared."

She backed out, conscious of Mark Trent's disturbing presence close beside her.

"The music has stopped! There go the foots!" She caught his sleeve, looked up and begged in an unsteady whisper:

"Do your best, Mark. This act will kill or make the play."

His lips were on hers so quickly that she had no chance to protest. He kissed her passionately, thoroughly; said in a husky whisper:

"Credit that to the silent policeman. Now, I'll play that part to the hilt."

Brooke tried to ignore her racing pulses. She mocked:

"I seem to be in the path of an emotional cyclone; first, Jerry Field; now you. I suppose Jed will be the next. Your cue! Quick! Quick!"

In an instant he was on the stage. Brooke shut her eyes tight in an effort to steady a whirling world.

Mark Trent's lips on hers had been like an electric current through her body. Every pulse, every nerve responded.

She listened. It was very still in front, a sort of hypnotized stillness. She could hear the voices on the stage, but she couldn't keep her mind on what they were saying. Even as she supplied properties, even as the actors made their entrances and exits she was thinking of Mark Trent's eyes as he had looked down into hers, was wondering what he wanted to tell her on the way home?

How Reyburnish! The incurable dramatic streak in the Reyburn temperament had been in the saddle when she had planned that.

CHAPTER XIII

As the curtain fell with dramatic slowness for the last time, the audience stood clapping and calling. As it rose again, Brooke saw the blond marcelle, second row center, make its way up the aisle followed by a man with sleek black hair. The producer and the manager! They had come back for the third. That must mean something. Were they leaving before speaking to Sam? He was on the stage now in the midst of the cast who had taken their bows; the arms of the women were heaped with flowers. He had put on coat and collar and tie but the white bow had gone rakish. He looked very young as he stood grinning boyishly and waiting for a chance to speak. His voice shook as he said:

"Thanks lots! Glad you liked it. Couldn't have put it across without their help." He indicated the men and girls around him on the stage, and the audience broke into thunderous applause. The curtain fell slowly.

Brooke's eyes were blinded by happy tears as she started for the dressing-room. She must get back to Lookout House to change for the party. The girls of the cast were going to Mark Trent's in the evening frocks they had worn in the last act. Leaving the wings, she collided with the marcelle blond. The New York producer! He was unaware of her murmured apology as he gesticulated and talked to his sleek-haired companion. She listened unashamedly and heard him say:

"It's got everything. Humor, suspense, moving simplicity, fidelity to ideals, and unflinching movement."

"But has it got box-office?"

"I'll gamble my last dollar on it. It's the old recipe for play-writing carried to perfection."

"Make 'em laugh; make 'em weep; make 'em wait.' Where'd you say that boy got his start?"

Brooke dodged acquaintances and strangers in evening clothes who were crowding on to the stage to greet the actors. In the dressing-room she slipped into her fur coat and ran downstairs to her town car parked near the rear entrance.

The snow was falling half-heartedly as if it had not quite decided if it were worth while to come down at all. She drove swiftly toward home. Mark Trent had asked her to plan his party, had told her to go the limit in preparations to make it a success.

"Go as far as you like with everything, only be sure that there is enough to eat and sufficient help. To have plenty is an obsession of mine."

There would be plenty and then some. Just before she left Lookout House for the Club theater, the caterer had arrived with his van and a horde of waiters. They had sounded like an army making camp.

Trent's Japanese cook came forward to open the door of the car when she arrived. Snow powdered his shoulders and cap. His eyes glittered in his swarthy face. His teeth gleamed as he ducked his head in a funny little bow. Brooke let down the window.

"I won't get out here, Taku. I'll run into our garage. All the space outside will be needed for the cars of the guests."

"You right, Mees. Thank you. Much big party, Kowa say."

Would there be room for Sam's coupe? Brooke wondered, as she drove into the garage. One corner had been filled with ice cream tubs. He could leave it outside, she decided. She shut off her engine and partially closed the door as she went out.

As she reached the dark hemlock behind the Other House, she lingered for an instant in its deep shadow. How still the world was. Snow fell as softly as if someone had slit open a pillow and shaken down its feathers. There was no near sound of surf tonight.

She shrank deeper into the purple gloom under the tree as two men came down the back steps from the kitchen—waiters, she knew by their clothing. Not more than five feet from her one of them stopped to light a cigarette. He growled:

"The boss can wait for them ice cream tubs till I get a smoke."

"Sure he can. Light up again and take a look at this."

A hand held a scrap of paper within the light of a match. The same voice said:

"It's the picture of the dame who said: 'He was a swell-dressed fella.' Guess I'll have to date her up!"

The other man closed his hand over the match.

"You an' your dames! Forget 'em for tonight, or you'll crack up on this job. Come on!"

As Brooke dressed in her room, the words and suggestive laugh of the man who had produced the picture kept boiling up through her jubilation over Sam's success, through the inescapable memory of Mark Trent's eyes and voice as he had caught her in his arms.

She was adjusting a rhinestone and synthetic emerald clip to the shoulder of her white satin frock when a thought forked through her mind like lightning. The amber and brown eyes of the looking-glass girl frowning back at her widened with amazement; her red lips moved.

"He said—he said—I'll have to date her up!"

In an instant she was on the floor beside her desk with a big manila envelope in her lap. She pulled out a bunch of clippings. She had it! The picture of a girl, Maggie Cassidy, and under it the caption:

"She said that the man she saw in the garage was a swell-dressed fella."

The waiter who had shown the other man the clipping was the Bath Crystal Bandit, the man she had recognized at the Supper club! He was the man who had tied up Hunt in the garage! Was he also the murderer of Lola Hunt?

Why was the man in Mark Trent's house tonight? His pal had said: "Forget 'em, or you'll crack up on this job." What job? Something big must have tempted him to come so near the scene of his last hold-up, or had that newspaper headline stating that he was being followed to Canada made him feel secure? What was he after? More jewels? "Get a peek at Mrs. Gregory out front, third row, center. She's blazing with jewels."

Jed Stewart's words answered Brooke's question as clearly as if whispered in her ear. The man had come for Mrs. Gregory's diamonds.

She must notify the police! She snatched her hand from the telephone in its cradle on the desk. Not that. Wires had ears. She would go herself. Across the causeway. To Inspector Harrison at headquarters. She could go and be back before she was missed. Suppose she were stopped on the way! Where was Henri? Was he in on this? She must locate him before she left the house.

She caught up a green velvet wrap, stuffed some bills into her emerald satin bag. Pelted down the stairs, into the living-room toward the bell. Stopped. Where was the parrot? He was not in his cage! Had he made another break for freedom? She looked between the gilded bars. What seemed to be merely a bunch of green feathers lay stiffly on the bottom.

"Well, if this isn't just one of those days!" she said aloud.

"Oh, Brooke!" Jerry Field called from the hall.

As she appeared in the doorway, he exclaimed:

"Of all the gorgeous creatures! You look like a million!"

"Jerry, drive me across the causeway, will you? Quick!"

"What's the matter?"

"I must go. Is your roadster here?"

"By the garage!"

Brooke's blood congealed. Suppose as they stepped into the car the two crook waiters should appear for a tub of ice cream? Would the men suspect her errand? Into her mind flashed her reply to Mark Trent:

"That's quite a suggestion that I end the poor boy's torment. I will. Tonight."

What a thought for this crisis!

"Wait a minute, Jerry! While I'm upstairs, set the parrot's cage in the back hall, please. I—I can't bear to have it here. You'll see why."

She raced up the stairs, charged into her bedroom, pulled a suitcase from the shelf. On the way down, she took the two lowest stairs in a jump. She thrust the case into Field's hand.

"What's the big idea?"

"Don't—ask—questions! Let's go!"

"You can't walk in the snow in those white satin sandals, you'll ruin the green heels."

"She pushed him toward the door. 'Get going! Get going!'"

"Well, I'll be darned! Come on."

Brooke felt the dampness between the straps of her sandals. It seemed miles to the garage. There was Jerry's roadster! A waiter was coming down the back steps. It might be the Bath Crystal Bandit! She called in a guarded voice to the Japanese who was directing parking, but loud enough for the man on the steps to hear:

"Taku! Put this suitcase in the rumble. And, Taku, if you see my brother, tell him—tell him," she raised her voice, "that Mr. Field and I have run away to be married."

Lesson for October 10

THE CHRISTIAN IN GOD'S KEEPING

LESSON TEXT—Jude 1-4, 17-25.
GOLDEN TEXT—Keep yourselves in the love of God, looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life.—Jude 21.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Why David Sang.
JUNIOR TOPIC—In God's Keeping.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Keeping Oneself Christian.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Safe in God's Keeping.

To be born is only to begin life. The years which stretch out before with their growth, their struggles, their joys, call for courageous living.

So it is with the Christian. He is a "born one," as we saw in our lesson of last Sunday. But when he is born again he is just ready to begin the Christian life.

The Epistle of Jude sheds much light on the dangers which beset the Christian's pathway and exhorts him to holy living and sacrificial service. It opens with a description of the Christian and closes with an ascription of praise to God. It reveals the Christian as one who is

I. Called in Christ (vv. 1, 2).

The entire Trinity is seen to be active in our redemption (See Revised Version). Jude writes "to them that are"

1. "Called"—The Holy Spirit calls men unto salvation.

2. "Beloved in God the Father"—for God is love.

3. "Kept for Jesus Christ"—until he appears.

II. Living for Christ (vv. 3, 4, 17-23).

As Jude began to write of the "salvation" which he had in "common" with his readers, the Holy Spirit moved him to deal with a very urgent and vital problem—the hostility of wicked men toward the gospel of Christ, and their efforts to destroy "the faith." The Christian life includes

1. Contending for the faith (vv. 3, 4). "The Faith" is the body of revealed truth, the gospel, the good news of redemption in Jesus Christ.

The world hates the gospel, and attacks upon it are to be expected, but the most insidious assault is that of those within the church (v. 4) who profess to believe in Christ. Against them and their destructive work Christians must "contend earnestly," at the same time praying that they may be delivered from their sin and its terrible judgment (vv. 15-16).

2. Observing the times in which they live (vv. 17-19). Some folk seem to think that being a Christian means entering into a place of security and rest and promptly going sound asleep. Far from it. The Christian, knowing God's Word, is keenly alert to the dangers of this ungodly world.

3. Keeping their own souls (vv. 20, 21). The best defense is a vigorous offense. The way to contend against error is to build up one's own faith by the study of God's Word, by communion with his children, but above all by prayer "in the Holy Ghost." And above all there will be an abiding in the love of God and a looking for the fulfillment of the mercy of Christ at his coming again.

4. Saving the souls of others (vv. 22, 23). Soul-winning is (or should be) the normal expression of the Christian's life. It is his crowning joy. It most effectively counteracts error and worldliness. It builds up the church. Why not do it?

Note that there are two types of sinners to be rescued. Some are "in doubt" (R. V.), needing tender and careful instruction. Others are in grave danger, and must be rescued by drastic reproof and decisive action. Soul-winning is urgent business.

III. Kept by Christ (vv. 24, 25).

The doxology at the close of Jude has been a haven of comfort and assurance for God's children throughout the centuries. Hither have come the strong in faith to rejoice and praise God. Here has been found the strengthening of faith by the fearful and trembling soul who had not yet learned that he may fully trust God. These verses present two truths.

1. Assurance. Our Saviour is able to keep us from falling, yes, even from "stumbling" (R. V.), and to present us "faultless," "without blemish" (R. V.), with exceeding joy, before the glorious presence of God.

2. Worship. Such a God and Saviour is indeed worthy of the out-going of every Christian heart in adoration and worship.

Work and Wait

Haste is not always speed. We must learn to work and wait. This is like God, who perfects his works through beautiful gradations.

Greatness of Trifles

"Commit thy trifles unto God, for to Him nothing is trivial; and it is but the littleness of man that seeth no greatness in a trifle."

Sabbath Days

Sabbath days are quiet islands on the tossing sea of life.

Doilies Offer Thrifty Way to Set Table

A perfectly appointed table is the dream of every woman's heart. With the simplest of crochet you can make this dream come true. This set of doilies, in four sizes, does the trick. There are a 6, 12 and 17-inch size suitable for luncheon and buffet sets as well as doilies while the largest, a 22-inch doily, is just the thing for in-between cloth on many a table. Use string or mercerized cotton—they'll stand long usage and be decorative too. Pattern 1462 contains directions for making the doilies shown; illustrations of them and of all stitches used; material requirements.

I LEARNED TO 'BEAT' ACID INDIGESTION

ONCE LIFE WAS MISERABLE, NO APPETITE... LITTLE SLEEP...UNTIL THE DOCTOR SAID 'ALKALIZE'

BUT NOW—AT THE FIRST SIGN OF ACID-INDIGESTION I USE PHILLIPS' AND I FEEL LIKE A NEW PERSON ALMOST IMMEDIATELY!

The fastest way to "alkalize" is to carry your alkali with you. That's what thousands do now that genuine Phillips' comes in tiny, peppermint flavored tablets—in a flat tin for pocket or purse. Then you are always ready.

Use it this way. Take 2 Phillips' tablets—equal in "alkalizing" effect to 2 teaspoonsful of liquid Phillips' from the bottle. At once you feel "gas," nausea, "over-crowding" from hyper-acidity begin to ease. "Acid" headaches, "acid breath," over-acid stomach are corrected at the source. This is the quick way to ease your own distress—avoid offense to others.

Is It Progress?

"Progress doesn't always make us happier. I'd even make bold to say that pretty often it doesn't even improve us."—Booth Tarkington.

The Curse of Progress

OF INTEREST TO THE HOUSEWIFE

Potatoes for Short Cakes.—Hot, boiled and mashed white potatoes are good in making short cakes and puddings. They not only save flour, but require less shortening.

Cleaning Enameled Sinks.—Those stubborn dark streaks which accumulate on enameled sinks and bathtubs can be removed with kerosene.

Johnny Cake.—One cup yellow corn meal, one cup bread flour, one-third cup sugar, one and one-half cups sour milk, half teaspoon soda, half teaspoon baking powder, one teaspoon salt. Mix and sift the dry ingredients twice, and gradually add the sour milk. Beat well, and bake in a shallow greased pan, in a moderate oven.

Dry Soiled Clothes.—When clothes are sent to the laundry they are usually paid for by weight. Money can be saved if the housewife makes certain all articles are dry before they are sent out.

When Washing Soft Polishing Dusters.—Rinse them in slightly soapy water instead of clear water. This makes the dusters much softer and they polish better.

When Peeling Small Onions.—Cover small onions with hot water and let stand for a minute or two and the skins are easily removed.

Strain the Starch.—Starch used in laundering should be strained to remove all lumps that might blister when ironing.

YOU CAN THROW CARDS IN HIS FACE ONCE TOO OFTEN

WHEN you have those awful cramps, when your nerves are all on edge—don't take it out on the man you love. Your husband can't possibly know how you feel for the simple reason that he is a man. A three-quarter wife may be no wife at all if she nags her husband seven days out of every month. For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age." Don't be a three-quarter wife, take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through."

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste
Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery. Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder may be burning, scanty or too frequent urination. There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

DOAN'S PILLS

Anything to Oblige

A young subaltern joined a guards depot, his upper lip as yet unadorned with even the suspicion of down. The adjutant sent for him. "You must grow a mustache." "Yes, sir." "And not one of those Chaplin affairs—a proper mustache." "Yes, sir." The interview was finished, but the subaltern did not move, so the adjutant asked: "Well, what more do you want?" "Any particular color, sir?"

Knows His Stuff

After the tiff she calmed down a bit. "But how can you love me, George," she said. "The doctor says I must have a course of slimming, and now you won't let me. I think that's brutal of you." He took her in his arms. "My darling," he replied, "I love you so much that I can't bear to lose an ounce of you."—London Tit-Bits Magazine.

He also asked that new music books be purchased and it was agreed by the Ass'n., that the books be bought at this time.

Mrs. Florence Steele was nominated and unanimously elected chairman of Ways and Means.

It was decided by the Ass'n., that each student keep their own uniform at home, this will eliminate the necessity of one or two members to press uniforms when ever the band plays.

Mr. N. Heiman and Mr. Paul Roesener were named by the president to get prices on a steel cabinet to be purchased by the Ass'n for the purpose of keeping music and other band property in. Mr. Geo. Rinke was appointed to purchase receipt books. Mr. Walter Olson gave a report on the findings of the by-law's committee. Some interesting comments and suggestions were made. More discussions on this subject will be done at the next regular meeting.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Unreality" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, October 3.

The Golden Text was, "Thus saith the Lord, What iniquity have your fathers found in me, that they are gone far from me, and have walked after vanity, and are become vain?" (Jeremiah 2:5).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "The Lord hath brought forth our righteousness: come, and let us declare in Zion the work of the Lord our God. He hath made the earth by his power, he hath established the world by his wisdom, and hath stretched out the heaven by his understanding" (Jeremiah 51:10, 15).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science Textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Everything good or worthy, God made. Whatever is valueless or baneful, He did not make,—hence its unreality" (p. 525).

Pilot Whale Not Dangerous

The pilot whale is not dangerous like its close relation, the killer whale. A full-grown specimen is usually not more than 20 feet in length; it is nearly black all over, and is sometimes known as the black fish. On the throat there is a whitish heart-shaped patch, which sometimes extends to a very narrow strip down the center of the under parts.

AMERICAN BOY INTRODUCES A NEW FOOTBALL GAME

In the early fall issues of THE AMERICAN BOY there'll be presented the story of a new game—six-man football—fast as professional football, wide open as basketball, thrilling as hockey!

The game came to life thru the need of small schools for some substitute for 11-man football, which was too expensive. Stephen Epler, a Nebraska graduate student in athletic, developed the game of six-man football to meet this need. In six-man football anybody can score, the possibility of injury from mass plays is minimized, and the game is open enough for spectators to follow every exciting development.

The new game is a hit. New schools are taking it up every day. In coming issues THE AMERICAN BOY tells the world about this practical new game. In addition, it presents The American Boy Official Handbook, which can be obtained from the magazine at 20 cents a copy, or 15 cents when bought in bulk.

NOTE: Subscription prices of THE AMERICAN BOY will be raised in the near future. Send your subscription order at once to take advantage of the bargain rates now in effect; one year at $1.00 or three years at $2.00. Foreign subscriptions 50c a year extra. Send your name, address and remittance to THE AMERICAN BOY, 7430 Second Blvd., Detroit, Mich. On newsstands the price is 15c a copy. Adv.

BOY! WHAT A LINE TO BUCK!

A WORD
Modern Parent...

PROTECT YOUR CHILDREN'S EYES!

● What Jimmy and Sally will accomplish in school this year depends on their eyes.

If there are serious defects in their vision, by all means see an eye specialist.

But beyond this first precaution, the first duty of the modern parent is to provide proper lighting facilities in those places in the home where children study, read, work or play.

Since educators tell us that 87 per cent of all sense impressions come through the eyes, proper lighting is especially needed at the desk or table where school work is to be done at home.

Check up on the lamps that your children will use. The correct lamp should be high enough that it gives good light over a wide area. It should be so shaded that the bright light will not shine directly into the eyes.

If the child sits in an armchair to read, there should be a lamp beside the chair.

An excellent lamp for reading or studying is the approved I. E. S. type which can light both upwards and downwards. Light thrown down is softened by a diffusing bowl that also reflects light upward for general illumination. Such illumination eases eye muscles. Without it, the eyes must constantly adjust themselves to areas of brightness and darkness, causing strain and fatigue.

These efficient, attractive lamps are on display in many types and sizes at your Public Service store and neighborhood dealers—and at remarkably low prices. See them today!

Hybrid Corn Most Efficient In Use of Manure

The most frequent application of manure in the dairy region is upon ground going into corn. Most of us are of the opinion that when we apply manure to corn ground the growing corn will absorb most of the manure plant food. Few of us realize the losses of manure nitrogen that follow application, both by volatilization into the atmosphere and leaching of the underground soil waters.

Nitrogen is the chief plant food element in manure. If we were to replace all the plant food materials contained in manure in forms of other commercial carriers the equivalent nitrogen bearing products would cost considerably more than all the other products put together. Consequently we can consider nitrogen bearing portion the most important.

Nitrogen seems to be the most unstable of all plant food elements and readily changes in the soil from one form to another and finally to the form of soluble nitrates in which form it is chiefly absorbed by plants and is not absorbed or converted into humous in combination with carbon and phosphorous (a process brought about by certain soil bacteria) then will be leached out by gravitational ground waters following rains. We are anxious that during the corn growing period the plant absorb as much of the nitrogen bearing soil solution or soluble nitrates, as it can use in its plant structure. As corn plants only absorb these soil nitrates or soil nitrogen during what we call their vegetative period, this brings us to the consideration of the two principal periods of the corn plant growth, into which we divide the corn growing cycle. These two periods are known as the vegetative and the translocative periods. The vegetative period begins at germination and ends at fertilization. It covers all the phases of early plant growth. The translocative or maturing period begins at the close of the vegetative period and extends thru the remainder of the corn life cycle.

During the vegetative period the plant extends the root structure and accumulates materials in the roots in the form of reserves, and with the change from the vegetative to the translocative period these soil nutrition roots with the reserves they contain are absorbed and translocated to the maturing seed or grain. During this translocative period no further nutrition is absorbed from the soil because the nutritive roots that in the first period gathered the plant food from the soil, including soil water nitrogen, are themselves being absorbed.

Incidentally, we might point out that the corn has two root systems, one the nutritional roots above described, which are absorbed in the translocative period; and the other, the water vascular fibre roots which are not absorbed but procure the water from the soil that carries on this absorption and the plant's life processes. To illustrate the fact that no nutrition is absorbed from the soil during the translocative period, it might be stated we could apply fifty tons of manure to the acre to corn land during the translocative period and none of it would be utilized by the corn, while on the other hand, the proximity of this plant food to the plant would be upsetting and harmful.

We therefore, realize that whatever plant food, including the outstandingly valuable nitrogen of the manure, is absorbed and made use of by growing corn must be absorbed during the vegetative period. In our region the duration of the vegetative period is approximately 70 days, extending from germination to fertilization of the embryos of the ear. Accordingly, corn plants to make the maximum use of manure and to avoid the losses of manure nitrogen that will occur by leaching if not absorbed in the vegetative period must do this quickly in this relatively short space of time.

It might be suggested that we could make use of this soil nitrogen, holding it for future use by the growth of grasses and weeds during the translocative period (and which often does happen) but this growth of weeds will compete proportionately to its growth with the corn plant for moisture. During recent years of moisture limitation such water competition would greatly lower yields, hence, we are forced to depend on the vegetative period of corn for the utilization of manure nitrogen.

We know that the outstanding difference between hybrid and open pollinated corn is the far greater root structure of hybrid and its deeper seated root system. This greater root system is able to go after the soil nitrogen in manure in much more vigorous fashion than the roots of open pollinated corn plants and consequently those engaged in the livestock system of farming including dairying will find the use of hybrid corn over open pollinated corn doubly profitable because it makes so much better use of manure and avoids manure leaching losses to a great extent. To handle the additional absorption of manure the hybrid corn plants need and make use of their deeper water vascular roots, and a very excellent illustration of this can be had by a visit to the Thomson Top-Yield Hybrid fields on Lincoln highway, U.S. 30, one-half mile west of the intersection with route 45, where you will note the still living tissues of the plants that resisted wilting by the late summer drouth, and also withstood the frost temperatures of the five frosts

Seek More Adequate Old Age Pension

Consternation reigns! "Oliver Twist has asked for more". Could it be that Charles Dickens writing in the midst of the 19th century visualized in the drawing of his characters the "Oliver Twists" of recipients of "Old Age Assistance" of today holding up their empty bowls crying out in desperation to the "Big Wigs", the "Limbkings" and "Bumbles" asking for more.

Whether or not here we are. I was told in the Will County O. A. A. office at Joliet by a member of the Commission that "It would not do to have a man like myself on the board because I had a heart and could not possibly enter into their deliberations for it is not a question of what an applicant NEEDS but rather what he can in OUR JUDGMENT HAVE according to law."

It has been suggested that a requisite qualification for the office of Superintendent of the O. A. A. board was that he saved money by reducing or cutting off awards, in other words saved the peoples' money by taking their own bread out of the hands of the needy aged before they could feed themselves.

A scene in the tragic drama in which the aged of Will County are the principles was enacted last Saturday afternoon at Joliet at a call meeting of citizens intent upon forming an organization for mutual benefit and protection in the securing of rights and privileges made possible for citizens of advanced age by social security legislation and appropriations. The meeting attended by fully 100 recipients of awards from the O. A. A. Department was held in the Gospel Temple Auditorium, thru the kindness of the pastor who tendered it as a free will offering for the occasion.

The meeting was called to order at 3:30 p. m. by Jesse H. Hinthorne who was later elected by acclamation as president of the organization and chairman of the investigating committee with Mrs. Genevieve Leyman as secretary-treasurer. Mr. Thomas Halliday was appointed as chairman of the provisional committee with Mrs. Flora Morrison and H. R. Allen as aids.

Mr. Hinthorn in opening the session brought a fund of information from data compiled from state records and read several letters from officials of the Illinois State Welfare Department.

On being called to the chair to assist in forming the permanent organization.

I evidently sounded the key note of sentiment among those assembled when I announced that I favored a pension of not less than $1 a day for all citizens 65 years of age or over, not doled out as an "assistance to Paupers", but as a legitimate right and inheritance of the aged under the Federal Social Security Legislation an enactment especially designed to take care of the economic situation in connection with the old age unemployment under the present social order with which the people find themselves confronted.

A representative of the local Will County O. A. A. organization altho the question had not been brought up in the meeting seemed to deem some defense of his department necessary and in the midst of a discussion on the subject of organization having gained the floor by permission of chairman Hinthorn, proceeded to give a demonstration of the courtesy extended to the citizens by the Commission to come into the office and argue their cases by indulging in a spirited argument and dispute with one of the ladies present.

In summing up I gave it as my opinion that these arguments have been brought up by reason of supposition on the part of members of the Commission without a basis of reliable fact, not so much with regard to the amount of the original award as the distressful uncertainty connected with the instability in time of payment and possibility of permanency.

A petitioner should only find it necessary to establish the fact of his age and residence, his citizenship and his possession of property and income.

The facts as set out in the petition, if true, spoke for themselves, if untrue penalties for falsifying are provided for by the statute. Arguments being senseless and useless, the resort of incompetents or incapacity or a desire to excuse or bolster up a false position.

The organization as formed in accordance with a prevailing harmonious agreement was without a dissenting vote. No discordant note of disapproval. An intelligent conception of needs and necessities was evident and when the motion was made that the name of the organization formed should be known as the "Will County Pensioners Association" and no reference to "Old Age Assistance", it received the most hearty approval.

The only resources of the Association are found in reliance in concerted action for redress of grievances and the prayers of the needy and their sympathizers. The purpose of the organization is to relieve the tension on the minds of those who in their few remaining years find themselves confronted by problems of distress and privation, a situation which threatens to rob them of the happiness that comes from reasonable plenty and the comforts of an undisturbed fireside. The progress of the Society will be watched with much interest.

Meetings will be called and announced from time to time and with Mr. Hinthorne and his associates on the committee to push the important work forward much good can and will be accomplished.

Yours Fraternally,
DON C. HALL

"Certain Basic American Rights"

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

In one of the most inspiring discussions that marked the writing of our Constitution, James Madison identified the people as "the fountain of all power," and insisted that by resorting to them all difficulties would be solved.

How true the statement was, subsequent history has proved. In virtually every serious national difficulty, it has been the voice of the average citizen, rather than of the partisan politician, that spoke the constructive answer. And within recent weeks America has seen another demonstration of this great verity.

At the National Convention of the American Legion, many resolutions were heard and adopted. But the one to strike a responsive chord in the heart of every American was that which reaffirmed "our belief in, and adherence to, and our resolve to defend, certain basic American rights and institutions . . ."

They included personal liberty, religious freedom, home and family and "constitutional guaranty to safeguard these precious rights."

This was not the voice of political partisanship—for the American Legion includes members of all parties. It was not the voice of any economic faction—for the Legion includes employers and employees, professional men and artisans; every strata of our great productive body of workers.

It was, instead, the pronouncement of the composite American, voiced by men who had demonstrated their faith in the American ideal of democracy and were willing to demonstrate it again.

It was an expression of that spirit which the Founders invoked and foresaw when they made this a government of, by, and for the people, and knew they had placed it in firm and capable hands.

BREVITIES

James Shields, fifty-five years old, a farmer of Bethany, was killed in an auto crash with a truck.

Louis Rosendahl, forty-eight years old, Cabery farmer, was killed by the kick of a horse near his heart.

More than 20,000 persons ate sauer kraut and wieners at Forrester as the village celebrated its twenty-fifth annual sauer kraut festival.

Charles E. Gueltig, sixty-two, who was mayor of Edwardsville from 1929 to 1932 and former corporation counsel for the city, died at his home.

A rigid rabies quarantine was put in effect in Vermilion county by action of the county board of supervisors upon the recommendation of D. F. Richardson, assistant chief state veterinarian.

Two Danville policemen were arrested on burglary warrants and authorities said they had recovered a number of guns, a radio, electric fan and electric clock, all stolen recently from downtown stores.

Announcement of plans to repair and reconstruction the Elijah Parish Lovejoy monument in Alton was made by F. Lynden Smith, state director of public works and buildings.

Director F. Lynden Smith of the public works department warned that motorists who fail to use the proper hand signals are subject to arrest the same as other traffic violators.

After doing the family baking and washing, Mrs. Frances Strum, thirty-four years old, of Aurora, hanged herself in the garage behind her home. She had been ill. She left notes to her husband and thirteen-year-old son.

Approval of a new two-year $6 basic day wage-scale agreement by a statewide referendum vote of better than four to one was officially announced in Springfield by Claude Pearcy, secretary-treasurer of the Progressive Miners of America.

Jerome Scaglione won the board of supervisors race in East St. Louis last April, but resigned when Kevin Clarke, naturalization examiner, notified him he was not a citizen of the United States. The township board said it would fill the vacancy by appointment or by a special election.

John Reising, seventy-seven years old, retired Aurora hardware merchant and part owner of the Woolworth block in that city, died at his home. He was the son of John Reising, who was in business in Aurora more than 75 years ago. Surviving are two sisters, Miss Lena Reising and Mrs. Elizabeth Oberman, both of Aurora.

The Illinois Municipal league, concluding its annual convention at Aurora, voted to launch a campaign to stop the spending of the municipal shares of the gasoline tax by the state and to prevent the state from fixing minimum salaries for state employees. Mayor Myron Lehman of Aurora was elected president of the league, succeeding Mayor Frank W. Bruggeman of Harvey.

County Judge R. H. Wilson of Clinton has an idea traffic law violators might profit by religious as well as judicial sermons. When Harold Shaffer, thirty, was convicted on charges of drunken driving, Judge Wilson not only restrained him from driving an automobile for one year, but also ordered him to attend church services each Sunday through the period.

The art department of Monmouth college will offer a new course, "Art in the Home," it was announced by Prof. T. H. Hamilton, head of the conservatory of music and the department of appreciation of art. Mrs. T. H. Hamilton will be the instructor of the new course. As outlined it will include costume designing, selection of clothing, home management and interior decoration.

Allen Brown, eighty years old, member of a prominent pioneer family and one of the most successful farmers and stock raisers in central Illinois, died of pneumonia at Bloomington. His grandfather, William Brown, and family came to Illinois by covered wagon from Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, in 1828. Mr. Brown has been a director of the People's bank of Bloomington. He was a Quaker.

In a new attack on the highway massacre Governor Horner enlisted 176 Chicago and downstate leaders to help map out ways and means to reduce and end the slaughter. The governor described the highway toll as "murder and suicide." The men and women named become members of the newly created Illinois highway safety commission. Charles M. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor club, is named president of the commission.

The Kankakee County Medical society went on record today as "unalterably opposed" to a bill to license doctors as civil officers of the United States government. The bill was introduced by Senator James Hamilton Lewis late in the regular session of congress.

James Perry, forty-three years old, ex-convict of New York city, was captured by Bloomington policemen, in the act of robbing a store. His lookout, Edward O'Brien, thirty-five years old, of Chicago, was quickly apprehended in the alley behind the place.

JUMPER TELLS PETER WHO THE STRANGER IS

PETER RABBIT could hardly believe what he had seen—the big black stranger, with the great terrible claws, backing away from Jimmy Skunk, and Jimmy acting just as if he were in the habit of meeting this stranger every day and making him get out of his way. And yet he knew that Jimmy never had seen him before. Peter always had had a great deal of respect for Jimmy Skunk. He knew that Jimmy just laughed at Reddy Fox, although Reddy is ever so much bigger than he, and he knew that Bowser the Hound always turned aside if he happened to meet Jimmy. But he really had not thought that Jimmy would dare to treat this great stranger so, and if he hadn't seen it himself he wouldn't have believed it because—well, because he couldn't have believed it.

"Supposing You Tell Me Who You've Seen," Said He, Quite as if He Had No Particular Interest in the Matter.

Peter was full of wonder and excitement as he hurried away to tell all whom he should meet what he had seen. He didn't know who the stranger was. Never had he seen anyone like him in the Green Forest. The very thought of him made Peter shake with fright, even if Jimmy Skunk should say that there was nothing to be afraid of, and Peter knew that this is just what Jimmy would say when he met him. Presently as he hurried, lipperty-lipperty-lip, through the Green Forest he met his cousin, Jumper the Hare.

"Oh, Jumper! Cousin Jumper! I've seen him!" cried Peter just as soon as he was near enough to make himself heard.

Jumper sat up and looked at Peter curiously. "Supposing you tell me whom you've seen," said he quite as if he had no particular interest in the matter.

"Why, the stranger! The great big stranger who made those tracks in the snow I told you about and whom you tried to find and couldn't. I saw him just a few minutes ago! Who do you suppose he is, and do you suppose he has come to the Green Forest to stay?" cried Peter, talking so fast that the words just tumbled out.

"How should I know?" replied Jumper the Hare. "Suppose you tell me something about him. What does he look like?"

"Well, he's big," began Peter. "He's bigger than anyone else in the Green Forest. Why, he's as big as Farmer Brown's boy! He wears a black fur coat. He stands on two legs and he walks on four legs, and he hasn't any tail."

Jumper yawned just as if he weren't the least bit interested. I've heard all that before from Sammy Jay," said he.

"And don't you believe it?" cried Peter.

Jumper the Hare smiled at Peter, and Peter knew right away by that smile that his big cousin had been teasing him. "Yes," said he, "I believe it because—well, because I have seen him myself."

"You have?" cried Peter, "and do you really know who he is?"

Jumper nodded. "Yes," said he, "he's an old acquaintance of mine."

"Who?" demanded Peter, his eyes popping out with excitement. "Tell me quick, who is he?"

"He's someone I used to know when I lived in the Great Woods before I came to live in the Green Forest on the edge of the Green Meadows," replied Jumper, speaking so slowly that Peter thought he would never get it out.

"But what's his name? Do tell me his name, Cousin Jumper," implored Peter.

"His name," replied Jumper slowly, very slowly, while Peter held his breath and leaned forward with eyes and ears and mouth wide open, "His name is—"

"Is what?" cried Peter.

"Is Buster Bear," replied Jumper the Hare.

IMPORTANCE OF WATER TO BODY

Look to Source of Supply
When Choosing a Home.

By EDITH M. BARBER

THE most important material which we take into our bodies through the mouth is completely lacking in food value! This sounds like a contradictory statement. It is, however, water which we are describing in these terms. As has been proven many times, man can live much longer without food than he can without drink, which he must have, not only to satisfy his thirst craving, but for use in every body process.

The first qualifications in choosing a place of residence is a liberal and sure water supply. Those of us who live in cities and suburbs take this for granted. This is not the case, however, in the country. It was brought to my attention in Maine when a new well was necessary. Captain Sinnott was called upon to locate the well on one of the veins of water which run at intervals through the region. He came armed with a crocheted willow twig, which, believe it or not, turned toward the ground when it found running water. Of course, it would not be so obliging for everyone, although we were all allowed to try our hand at divining. One or two of us actually found that we had the power, although we were scientific scoffers.

To go back to the importance of water which too often we neglect to drink in the proper quantity. At least eight glasses should be taken daily if our body machinery is to be supplied with amounts which will enable it to run efficiently. Some of this may be taken at meals if it is drunk after food has been chewed and swallowed. The rest may be taken between meals. Part of the supply may of course be in the form of any sort of liquid beverage.

1 pint grape juice
½ cup lemon juice
¼ cup sugar
1 cup water

1 pint tomato
Mix the cheese, onion or chives and paprika well and pack in a small bowl to set in the refrigerator

DOUBLE WINDOWS FOR CASEMENTS

DURING the warm times of year, casement windows that swing outward are certainly attractive. This is not only for appearance, but for the full ventilation that comes with the opening of an entire window space. In winter, however, the situation is reversed. Out-swinging casement windows are more likely to leak than is the case with windows of other kinds. Also, the ordinary form of double window cannot be used.

When there are two or more casement windows in a room, it is unusual for more than one to be opened during bitter weather. This being so, all of the windows but one can be kept closed, and ordinary double windows put on outside. For the one window that is to be opened, a removable double window can be attached inside. If the casement is provided with inside insect screens on hinges, the screens can be replaced with glass. Another possibility is a sheet of plate glass covering the entire opening, set in a frame of wood molding, fitted to the inside of the window frame. The molding should have good-sized handles attached to it, so that it can be easily moved, and when in place, it is held by simple bolts or turn-bolts.

Double windows raise the temperature of a room by many degrees. There is far less chilling of the space near a window, and drafts in the room are greatly cut down.

YOUNG wives are always telling us that they can't drag their Bens and Bills out of the house of an evening. They are sure that they have married drips, after all.

If we are in a romantic mood when one of these confidences comes along, we are always horrified. Don't the poor girls know how lucky they are to have husbands who love their hearts? Don't they realize that they are envied the length and breadth of Maple avenue? Don't they remember that two people sitting under the same lamp was always their picture of marital bliss before they were married?

But sometimes our modern mood is upon us, and we tell our fretting friends to act their age. To use their brains. A temper, we tell them, is just a sign of an empty head. If you really want your husband to go places with you, try to think up places that he might really like to go. Don't be unimaginative and suggest the movies every night, or a bridge party at the Simpsons. By mere repetition he gets bored. Think up thirty-one different places you might go, and spring a new one every night in the month. Suggest ferry rides and moonlight swims and country fairs. Ten to one, by the end of the month your Ben or Bill will catch fire. If he doesn't, maybe he is a drip.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—Some weeks ago when the Treasury was parading a lot of names of well known individuals before a joint congressional tax committee, I discussed the purposes of the investigation and reached the conclusion that the whole affair was staged. If I remember correctly, I called it a vaudeville stunt, designed by the Treasury to save its face for having made bad guesses as to tax collections. The tax collections, as everyone knows, were much below New Deal estimates and somebody had to be the goat. So, it was natural to make rich men the goat by calling them tax evaders.

Finding the Goat

At the same time, I reported to you the fact that there was a difference of opinion among Treasury subordinates. Some of them wanted to make a great show of names of individuals who had resorted to practices not prohibited by law in order to reduce their taxes.

I did not know at that time how serious the disagreement was within the Treasury. It has only lately come out into the open. As a result, two important Treasury officials have quit their jobs and have gone back to private life. I refer to Morrison Shafroth and Russell I. Ryan, chief counsel and assistant chief counsel, respectively, of the bureau of internal revenue. These two men know more about tax evaders and tax avoiders than anybody else in the Treasury but they had one grievous fault. They wanted to be honest about the whole situation. That was a fault because being honest did not make possible a flamboyant display of hatred for taxpayers who had employed legitimate means to pay as little tax as the law permitted.

As far as I can ascertain, Messrs. Shafroth and Ryan wanted to cooperate fully with the higherups in the Treasury in so far as a tax investigation by a joint congressional committee would point the way for improvement of the law. They knew, as many others know, that the internal revenue laws have holes in them. The smart lawyers and smart taxpayers naturally have taken advantage of these holes in the law because they are human despite the fact they are rich. So, the chief counsel and his assistant proposed to Secretary Morgenthau and Treasury General Counsel Herman Oliphant that the investigation be made along lines of a scientific character, that close study be given to some of the methods that had been employed to avoid taxes. In other words, Shafroth and Ryan were anxious to develop legislation on the basis of the experiences which they had had and loopholes they had found to be in common use. But their fault was honesty, as government officials would not be denied the vaudeville performance and the columns upon columns of publicity which Mr. Morgenthau and Mr. Oliphant, not to mention President Roosevelt, desired to see.

I stayed through all of the hearings before the joint congressional committee. They ran for fourteen days. Each day the Treasury trotted out another official as the witness before the committee and he was armed with a prepared statement which he read for some two hours to a committee that sat back in easy chairs and smoked cigars in comfort—while newspaper men avidly wrote stories about rich men, some good and some bad, who had committed the heinous sin of paying as little tax as the law permitted.

Stooping Low

The resignations of Shafroth and Ryan ran far convince me that the Treasury stooped to about the lowest level it has reached in recent years. Of course, it was not the first time in our history that income tax has been used for political intimidation. Reprisal is a strong word to use about government officials but I cannot escape the feeling that the Treasury used that investigation as a method of reprisal against many men who had opposed the New Deal.

I reach that conclusion on the basis of a review of the names which Messrs. Shafroth and Ryan refused to parade before the committee but which the Treasury itself used as the principal actors. Not more than three of the eighty-odd names presented to the committee had contributed to the Democratic national campaign fund a year ago. The tactics were not far from those employed by the late Huey Long in enforcing his will upon the people of Louisiana.

I can add to this a statement of the fact that Under-Secretary Magill, who had charge of presenting the so-called evidence before the committee at the capitol, believed the Treasury was not following an entirely wise course in the methods it employed. But Mr. Magill went along with the scheme and there were many of the correspondents covering that hearing who felt he tried to do the job fairly.

So now Morrison Shafroth and Russell Ryan are back in private life and in their places are men picked by Mr. Oliphant, men who are likely to obey orders regardless of the whims of Mr. Oliphant and Secretary Morgenthau.

Another instance of official action that seems to indicate a bad trend in government lately has occurred. This incident was propagated by the federal power commission, one of the numerous federal agencies that is supposed to be largely judicial in character but which is equipped at the same time with administrative powers.

Indicates Bad Trend

The facts are these: There was a group of men who served as directors of the Associated Gas and Electric company. These same individuals were directors for numerous corporations that are subsidiaries of that same company.

The federal power act provides that the commission may require directors of one power company to divest themselves of connection with any other power companies—one of the strongest features of the law. The commission is empowered to make its own investigation of these interlocked directorates and then on its own motion may require such directors to appear and give the commission satisfactory reasons why they are holding places on the boards of more than one corporation. This also is a sound provision of law and undoubtedly works to the benefit of all consumers of light and power.

Before I proceed further, let it be definitely understood that I have not a great deal of respect for the Associated Gas and Electric company. Its record does not warrant my respect as an observer. Undoubtedly, however, its management complies with the terms of its corporate charter but as a great public utility it has obligations to the public beyond the terms of its charter and it is my opinion that the moral obligations are such that this age demands full observation of them.

This brings us to the crux of the power commission action. Late in September Vice Chairman Seavey of the commission had ordered the group of directors referred to above to show cause why they should not be compelled to relinquish various positions on other boards of directors. A hearing date was set. A few days before the hearing date, the directors in question resigned the positions to which the commission objected and then their attorney issued a statement which said, in effect, that they had resigned because they were convicted in the minds of the commission before the commissioners had heard the case. He used rather strong language, perhaps too strong in expressing his views.

Upon publication of the attorney's statement, Vice Chairman Seavey promptly ordered him to appear before the commission to give his reasons for the statement and to defend himself against disbarment from practice as a lawyer before the commission.

Now, lest I be misunderstood, I do not know the attorney, Mr. Paxson; I know nothing about the merits of the case in question. But it is significant that an agency of the government suddenly decides that it can prevent a man from earning his living because he criticized members of that agency.

Occasionally, situations develop in national politics that provide a real laugh. One of them is now at hand. It results from the nasty controversy that swirls around the head of Hugo Black of Alabama, newly appointed associate justice of the Supreme court, who is charged with being a member of the Ku Klux Klan.

Terrible as is the charge and worse if it eventuates that Mr. Justice Black still is subject to the oath of the invisible empire, there is humor in the way a lot of senators and other government officials are running to cover. It has been almost a scramble among Democratic senators to let the public know by issuing statements that they would not have voted for Senator Black's confirmation as a member of the court if they had known he was a klansman. It makes one laugh again when one recalls how carefully the majority of the Democrats in the senate refused to hear evidence or hold any sort of a hearing concerning Mr. Black's qualifications. They did this by voting down a motion for hearings.

It is not pleasant to contemplate how the senate so many times passes on judicial appointments with the carefree abandon of a boy on his way home from school.

'Way Back When

By JEANNE

BETTE DAVIS WAS AN USHERETTE

LIFE has a strange way, sometimes, of repeating a circumstance from our previous struggles, as if to remind us that what may have once seemed a difficult trial was actually preparation for a later triumph. I am thinking, particularly, of Bette Davis and the marvelous performance she gave as the waitress, Mildred, in "Of Human Bondage."

Bette Davis was born in Lowell, Mass., in 1908. Her mother had only a small alimony with which to support Bette and her sister, so she became a professional photographer. After attending the Mary Arden school of Peterboro, N. H., Bette went to Cushing academy of Boston. There, she waited on tables to earn her tuition. To the sixteen-year-old little girl, whose dramatic ambitions made her super-sensitive to her role in life, her occupation as waitress was humiliating.

ing in contrast to the advantages enjoyed by her fellow students. Miserable though her school days were, that occupation was to be the role of one of her greatest triumphs. Would Bette Davis have played such a convincing "Mildred" if circumstances had never forced her to be a waitress at school?

Recognition came to Bette Davis soon after school. She had always wanted to be an actress and her mother encouraged her, although her father thought she should take a business course in New York and prepare to be a stenographer. She attended a dramatic school in New York instead, and then obtained a job as an usherette in the Cape Playhouse of Cape Cod, Mass. Finally she was given a small part, and rose rapidly in the theater, going on to Hollywood where she rose to stellar heights in "Of Human Bondage." For her performance in "Dangerous" she received the Motion Picture award in 1935.

RADIO STAR RAN A CONCESSION

FORTUNE'S favorites do not always bear marks to distinguish them from her failures. Bob Burns, who with his "bazooka" has become nationally known for his radio broadcasts and motion picture work, for many years looked like a failure. He was born in Van Buren, Ark., in 1896, and was always fond of music. His first "bazooka" was a horn made from a piece of pipe welded to a funnel, because he had nothing else to play. After two years in college, he joined some friends in Oklahoma raising peanuts. Bob gave that up to go back to Van Buren where he joined a minstrel troupe at three dollars a week. He tried to get a theatrical job in New Orleans, next he tried New York, with no luck, and went to Little Rock, Ark. There, he failed at trying to sell advertising on commission.

During the World war, Bob Burns was in the marines, was a crack rifle shot, and entertained the soldiers with his "bazooka." After the war, he started a concession on the boardwalk at Atlantic City, running a game of chance. He married a girl who worked in another concession and, together, they started a dance hall; but it failed. Failure after failure. And in the midst of his troubles, his son was born.

But then Bob Burns got a job in vaudeville, and in a few short years he was at the top of the entertainment world, with contracts for stage, motion pictures, and radio. His "bazooka" in which he had such faith, but which seemed such hopeless comedy to many people, is with him today and nationally known.

EMMANUEL OF ITALY TAKES THINGS EASY

Coin Collecting and Agriculture Occupy Time.

Rome, Italy.—Completely liberated from many onerous government duties which are now jealously guarded by Benito Mussolini and his lieutenants, King Victor Emmanuel divides his spare time between his coin collection and agriculture.

A passionate numismatist, the king's coin collection is said to be one of the most complete and richest of the continent. Coins pour into the Quirinal from faithful Italians scattered in all corners of the world.

Since the advent of fascism agriculture has caught the king's fancy. The Mussolinian slogan, "Back to the Earth," is respectfully observed by the Italian ruler.

Shortly after the World war King Victor Emmanuel donated a large part of his private property to needy war veterans. He now possesses three large estates: Castelporziano, in the picturesque Roman Campagna; Tombolo, in fertile Tuscany, and his favorite estate of San Rossore, attached to the summer villa of the royal house of Savoy.

Studies Summer Plants.

The royal estate of Castelporziano is famous throughout Europe for its excellent hunting preserves. Its 12,000 acres overlook the Tyrrhenian coastline. Seven thousand acres are covered with thick woods, principally pine trees. A small section of the estate is dedicated to an experimental center for the study and growth of summer plants and flowers. Queen Helen supervises work here. The rest of the estate only recently had been dedicated to the production of first quality wheat.

The wheat fields are under the direct control of Sen. Nazzareno Strampelli, a master mind in wheat problems, whose studies and works are carefully followed in Canada, Australia and Argentina.

The Castelporziano estate of his majesty now produces 75,000 quintals of excellent wheat a year.

The Tombolo estate, belonging to the prince of Savoy for centuries, was a boggy waste of marsh lands before King Victor took to agriculture. Its 3,000 acres were reclaimed quickly. The reclaimed land now has a regular output of two and a half quintals of sugar beets per acre, a notable contribution to the nation's autarchy promoted by Premier Mussolini.

Vineyards Also Rich.

Its rich vineyards produce excellent wine for his majesty's table.

The king's pet estate is San Rossore. He spends his summer vacations there with the royal family. A fertile forest produces excellent lumber while large fields yield rich wheat, maize, sugar beets and grapes.

Following the footsteps of his father, Crown Prince Humbert also is showing increasing interest in agriculture.

Following his marriage to Princess Marie-Jose of Belgium in 1930, the king donated to his only son the royal castle of Racconigi, in Piedmont, famous for its beautiful gardens.

In 1935, when 52 nations enforced sanctions upon Italy for having invaded Ethiopia, Prince Humbert ordered the ornamental parks of Racconigi to be transformed into wheat fields. He divided the estate into small lots, which were distributed among poor farmers of the surrounding countryside.

Wooden Salt Mortar Is

Prize Relic of Druggist

Eaton Rapids, Mich.—A prized relic from old England now belonging to Harry G. Heaton, Eaton Rapids druggist, is a wooden salt mortar more than 300 years old. It was made by a Heaton ancestor in 1616 and, with documents explaining its history, handed down from father to son. Although the papers have been lost, the story is remembered by Mr. Heaton's father, Henry G. Heaton, of Carson City, Mich.

In 1616 a hard maple tree on John Heaton's homestead in England blew down during a storm. From the wood of this tree he made utensils of all sorts, including the mortar and pestle which he considered his masterpiece. It stands eight and one-half inches high, with a base four and one-half inches in diameter, and it measures five and one-half inches in diameter at its largest circumference.

No stain or other finish was ever put on the wood, Mr. Heaton says, but age and use have so polished and darkened it that it looks like finished walnut.

Potatoes Not Fattening,

Expert on Foods Asserts

Ames, Iowa.—Contrary to popular belief, a few potatoes more or less in the daily diet will have no effect on the waistline, according to Miss Ruth Cessna, nutritionist at Iowa State college.

About 80 per cent of a potato is just plain water, she said, and consequently not very fattening.

From a calory standpoint, a medium sized potato rates equally with a baking powder biscuit, a tablespoon and one-half of French dressing, or even a good sized apple or orange.

Fall Fashion Parade

BE THE first to wear the new

Fall fashions in your group—let Sew-Your-Own help you to step right out in front, in the parade of new Fall Fashions. Today's trio gives you wide choice. Your first occasion frock if you are young and slim is a good looking basque model; for run-around a pretty yoke model that is as easy to make as it is to wear; and if you are full bodied a jabot model that takes away inches.

The slim wasp waist and short puffed sleeves above a swing skirt are as young as the morning. Have it in a pretty dark print banded in velvet ribbon for every afternoon festivity. It's a dress that you'll wear all through the winter.

Yoke-Style House Frock. Every woman will be quick to see the advantages of this frock, in style and wearability. The round yoke buttons at front and gives a fresh, young look to this design. Best of all, it is cut in one piece from neck to hem so that you can make it in practically no time at all. The waistline is darted for snug fit. You'll look and feel years younger in this model—wear it 'round the house and for afternoon, too.

Look Slim and Svelte. The newest fashions give you a slim, sleek look even if you are not blessed with a svelte figure. The jabot model in the illustration is designed to make even the woman who is a bit on the plump side look sleek and inches slimmer. Make this dress in one of the new thin wools and see how you'll stand out in your crowd as a fashion leader.

The Patterns. Pattern 1257 is designed for sizes 12 to 40. Size 14 requires 4 1/2 yards of 39 inch material and 11 yards of ribbon to trim. Pattern 1380 is designed for sizes 34 to 48. Size 36 requires 4 1/2 yards of 39 inch material. Pattern 1373 is designed for sizes 34 to 50. Size 36 requires 3 1/2 yards of 54 inch material and ing and will hook up with all the major routes entering Chicago.

As no expensive bridges or grading exist on the remaining gap south of Lincoln Highway on Wolf road the cost would not be as heavy as would otherwise be the case and this short stretch should be included in the state's highway program for next year. If the matter is given the proper support there is no reason why this cannot be done. With Cook county doing its part in completing Wolf road it is up to Will county to see that this important highway is also completed in Will County.

Inasmuch as Cook County is preparing to carry on the paving of the Wolf road north of 143rd street, the Mokena Village Board at their meeting Tuesday evening passed a resolution petitioning Supervisor Wm. Kampe of Frankfort to use his influence to get the Illinois State Highway Department to place the paving of the gap of two and a half miles south of Lincoln Highway on the 1938 road program so that the Wolf road paving from the Lincoln Highway to route 45 in Will County can be completed.

TINLEY PARK

Roman Gonia who has been operating the Tinley Park Drug Store in the Andres building since the death of Mrs. G. Dini, greatly surprised his patrons and many friends the past week when he announced that he was leaving for a new location at Ojibwa, Wisconsin. Mr. Gonia and family left Tinley Park Wednesday afternoon for their new home.

When Mr. Gonia first located in Tinley Park, he opened his drug store in the Hollstein building and later moved into the Andres building. He was a very public spirited citizen and was very active in civic matters and he will be missed by his many friends, who wish him an abundance of success in his new location.

Mrs. Peter Wannemacher, a life long resident of this section, was delightfully reminded of passing her 80th mile stone in life, when members of her family held a surprise birthday party in honor of the event in the Geo. Wannemacher home last Sunday. A most pleasant time was enjoyed. Mrs. Wannemacher is quite hale and hearty.

The Hat Shop Bunco Club held a masquerade party in the home of Mrs. August Mesenbrink Wednesday evening.

The Tip Top Meat Market which has been in operation in the Hollstein Bldg., next to the Royal Blue store, suspended business last week. Whether the market will be re-opened has not been announced.

Mr. and Mrs. Edw. Teske of Truman, Minn., are visiting with Tinley Park relatives and friends.

News items for the Tinley Park Times may be left at the J. C. Funk or Royal Blue stores since the local drug store has gone out of business. Copies of the Tinley Park Times will also be on sale at these stores.

A host of friends held a surprise farewell party in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Roman Gonia last Saturday evening. They all came to the back door at 10 o'clock. Mrs. Gonia was called to the door by her daughter, Dorothy, saying some one wants to "see you" and they all called "surprise". Dancing, singing and plenty of food was the evening's diversion.

They also presented to the couple a lovely gift and wished them luck and happiness in their new undertaking.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Noehring and Mr. and Mrs. John E. Swisher motored to Bloomington, Ill., last Tuesday. Enroute they visited Maurice O'Connell, the little boy sponsored by the Niagatri Girls club, who lives at Normal, Ill. Maurice was very happy to see Mrs. Swisher and wants to thank the members of the Niagatri Girls Club for his birthday dollar.

The Garden Department of the Tinley Park Woman's Club will hold its first meeting Thursday October 12 at 2 o'clock in the home of Mrs. Frank Baldwin, Garden Chairman. Any member who is interested in this department of the Club is urged to come. Subject will be "Types of Daffodils and their culture."

Community Garden Group to Meet

The Community Garden Group of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, will hold its third outdoor meeting Thursday October 14 in the Forest Preserve at 143rd and Harlem Ave. Meet at the shelter at 12 o'clock, bring your own lunch; coffee will be served. Midlothian Club will be the hostess with Mrs. Burton Garden chairman presiding. All club members of the community are invited. Mrs. Volland of the Homewood Women's Club will be there to take care of the question box.

P-T. A. NOTES

The Tinley Park Parent-Teacher Association will entertain and welcome fathers as members, at an evening meeting, Friday October 8, at 8 p. m. This is membership week and a cordial invitation is extended to both old and new members.

Changing Color of Sapphire

One of the neatest tricks of a skillful lapidary is to turn a white or yellow sapphire, having but one small blue patch, into a uniformly blue gem. He cuts it so that the blue spot, arranged at the lower terminus of the stone, is traversed by all the emergent light.—Collier's Weekly.
